Biographical note

David Lloyd MacIntosh was a knee-surgery and sports medicine pioneer.

David Lloyd MacIntosh was born on June 6, 1914 in Middle Musquodoboit, a small community near Halifax, Nova Scotia. MacIntosh was the second youngest of six children in his family, and excelled in his schooling from an early age – winning the Governor-General's Academic Gold Medal while in high school.

MacIntosh attended Dalhousie University in Halifax, where he studied English literature and received his Bachelor of Arts in 1933. His love for literature, especially poetry, was fueled by MacIntosh's father, a United Church minister who loved poetry and recited it to MacIntosh from a young age. After graduating from Dalhousie, MacIntosh took a job teaching, though he realized quickly that he it would not be his lifelong career. Instead, MacIntosh decided to pursue medical school at Dalhousie, first obtaining a Bachelor of Science in 1934, and earning his Doctor of Medicine in 1939, graduating as a class Gold Medalist.

It was MacIntosh's first internship that initially brought him to Toronto to work at Toronto General Hospital. He was only briefly at Toronto General before joining the Royal Canadian Navy as a surgeon-lieutenant during the Second World War. While in the Navy, MacIntosh first worked on deep sea diving experiments with British scientist J.B.S Haldane. MacIntosh also served as a physician aboard the HMS Philante, which helped to escort freighters across the North Atlantic Ocean. Before the end of the war, MacIntosh returned to Canada and treated senior officers at a hospital in Ottawa. While in Ottawa, MacIntosh met and married Elaine Dickie. Together they had three children, Doug, Ian and Ann.

When the war ended in 1945, MacIntosh returned to Toronto to finish his internships, which led to a scholarship year in the United Kingdom involving work in several medical facilities which were specializing in the new field of orthopedics. MacIntosh became especially interested in knees and athletic injuries, leading to the opening of his own practice in Toronto in the early 1950s.

MacIntosh also accepted a post with the UofT's Hart House clinic, which allowed him to host clinics on weekday afternoons for injured Varsity athletes and eventually led to his appointment as the team doctor for the Varsity football and hockey teams.

MacIntosh also accepted a cross-appointed position at the UofT in the early 1950s teaching interns, residents, and undergraduate students while also working as an orthopedic consultant for the Princess Margaret Hospital dealing with cancer patients, and the Christie Street and Sunnybrook hospitals for war veterans.

Working with wounded veterans and many injured athletes, MacIntosh would often have to diagnose patients with irreparable torn anterior cruciate ligaments (ACL), and began to think of ways to successfully repair the knee. In 1957, MacIntosh invented the "pivot-shift" test to determine how the knee had been injured – a test that is still the standard in medical practice today. His testing eventually led him to perform the first successful surgery for repairing a torn ACL in the early 1960s.

His interest in orthopedics was not limited to knee injuries. During the 1960s and 70s, MacIntosh also worked with damaged hips (hemiarthroplasty), ankles, shoulders, and backs, and researched and perfected various difficult surgical procedures such as high tibial osteotomy and hip replacements, and treated a wide-range of patients suffering from trauma, osteo and rheumatoid arthritis, cancer (destruction of bones), congenital deformities, neck and spine injuries, and hand, foot and ankle injuries.

In the 1970s and 80s, demand for MacIntosh's skills and knowledge increased, and he became a consultant for various organizations such as the Workmen's Compensation Board (WCB), Workplace Safety and Insurance Board (WSIB), the Canadian Medical Protective Association (CMPA). He also worked on many high-profile athletes such as the downhill skiers the "Crazy Canucks", and ballerina Veronica Tennant, who became the first person to dance after successful ACL surgery and rehabilitation. As MacIntosh's career wound down, his focus turned to caring for aging patients suffering from arthritis and joint problems, and he was known for his long term approach and vigorous follow-up procedures with patients.

MacIntosh retired from his practice in 1984, but kept seeing patients part-time until 2002, when he turned 88 years old. MacIntosh died on January 12, 2013 at the age of 98. The David L. MacIntosh Sport Medicine Clinic, which treats sport-related injuries at the University of Toronto, was named after him in 1990.

Scope and content

Date range: 1926-2013

Extent: 13.44 m (110 boxes) of textual and graphic records; moving images; artifacts

This fonds mainly consists of records covering MacIntosh's professional life from the beginning of his studies as a doctor during and just post-World War II up to and beyond his retirement in 1984. Very little of MacIntosh's private life is documented in these records.

Arrangement: The fonds has been split into the following series: 1. Biographical Information, 2. Notes and Research, 3. Lectures and Reports, 4. Conference and Symposia Involvement, 5. Professional Organizations, 6. Articles and Papers, 7. Correspondence, 8. Hospital Employment, 9. Medical Practice Administration, 10. Patient Files, 11. Certificates and Artifacts, 12. Photographs and Media.

Access: Many series within this fonds contain patient records and information, which are restricted for 150 years from the last day of file creation in accordance with the Personal Health Information Protection Act (PHIPA). The files listed below are restricted. Refer to each series-level description for details.

- Series 1: B2013-0036/001(06)-(11), (13)-(14)
- Series 2: B2013-0036/003(26)-(27) and /005(04), (06)-(07), (14), (16)
- Series 6: B2013-0036/012(10)
- Series 7: B2013-0036/014(05) and (07)
- Series 8: B2013-0036/016(10)
- Series 9: B2013-0036/017(01)-(04), (06), (08) and B2013-0036/020-/022
- Series 10: B2013-0036/023-/109
- Series 12: Most of this series in boxes 001P-/003P and /001M. See file list for details.

Boxes: B2013-0036/001-/109, /001Art, /001P-/003P and /001M

Series 1: Biographical information

Date range: 1966-2013

Extent: 0.12 m (1 box) of textual records

Scope and content: This series consists of records mainly dealing with MacIntosh's personal life. The series includes MacIntosh's curriculum vitae, a lengthy deposition documenting his entire life, and numerous records dealing with his personal tax and insurance information.

Access: This series is open except for the files listed below which are restricted until 2043:

Series 2: Notes and research

Date range: ca. 1940s-1980s

Extent: 0.48 m (5 boxes) of textual records

Scope and content: This series consists of notes and research on various medical ailments such as knee and hip injuries but also various fractures, diseases and medical deformities. The notes and research also contain procedures to be conducted on patients, largely from MacIntosh's early medical career. Many of the records are handwritten, and contain annotated manuscripts and publications, and likely served as reference files for MacIntosh's day-to-day practice.

Arrangement: This series is organized chronologically.

Access: The files listed below in this series are restricted for 150 years from the last day of file creation in accordance with the Personal Health Information Protection Act (PHIPA). See file list for further details.

Series 3: Lectures and reports

Date range: ca. 1940s-1984

Extent: 0.12 m (1 box) of textual records

Scope and content: This series consists mainly of early lectures and reports given and compiled by MacIntosh. It is unclear whether MacIntosh compiled the lectures notes from his own professional development courses, or if he compiled the notes in order to use in his own teaching. Topics which MacIntosh frequently lectured on included fractures, knee injuries, athletic injuries, and joint pain. The series also consists of reports commissioned by various medical bodies, as well as guest talks given by MacIntosh at various hospitals.

Arrangement: These lectures and reports are arranged chronologically.

Access: Open

Series 6: Articles and papers

Date range: [ca. 1940s]-1995

Extent: 0.24 m (2 boxes) of textual records

Scope and content: This series contains research notes and data, drafts and final versions of some of MacIntosh's articles and papers. Not all of these papers were published – many were written to present at various talks, or to document various medical procedures which MacIntosh was working on. Some of the records in this series appear to be papers that MacIntosh started and never completed, or that led to different papers all together. The series also contains several papers that MacIntosh either co-wrote, or helped to edit.

Arrangement: The series is arranged in chronological order.

Access: The file listed below is restricted for 150 years from the last day of file creation in accordance with the Personal Health Information Protection Act (PHIPA).

Series 9: Medical practice administration

Date range: 1950-2003

Extent: 1.26 m (6 boxes) of textual records

Scope and content: This series contains records from MacIntosh's medical practice. The series includes MacIntosh's day planners and appointment books, account books, office income and expenses information, telephone message books, and his patient Simplex System, which helped MacIntosh keep track of patient appointments and payment information. The series also contains some records dealing with office space rentals, and some correspondence with various prosthesis manufacturers regarding the use of their projects within the clinic.

Arrangement: The series is arranged mainly by the function of the records.

Access: The files listed below in this series are restricted for 150 years from the last day of file creation in accordance with the Personal Health Information Protection Act (PHIPA).

Series 10: Patient files

Date range: 1926 – ca. 1990s

Extent: 9.4 m (87 boxes) of textual and graphic records

Scope and content: This series contains a selection of MacIntosh's patient files from several medical practices – the Toronto General Hospital, the Princess Margaret Hospital, Sunnybrook Hospital and the Hart House Clinic for student athletes at the University of Toronto. Included in this series are patient files for MacIntosh's own practice at the University of Toronto's Medical Arts Building as well as patient files and case information for the many litigations and Workers Compensation Board/Workplace Safety Insurance Board cases for which MacIntosh served as an expert medical consultant. Lastly, included in this series are a set of patient files from Drs. Allan Gross and John C. Cameron, two younger doctors who worked in the orthopedic field with MacIntosh.

Most of the files in this series contain patient intake information, background medical charts, diagnoses, treatment plans and follow-up reports. Occasionally, the patient files will include photographs and x-rays. The series is arranged in order to reflect how MacIntosh kept his patient files under several different systems. MacIntosh arranged some of his patient files based on the injury or affliction facing the patient. Other files were arranged alphabetically, and many were arranged using a numbered system. The patient files belonging to patients seen at the Hart House Clinic were also kept separately by MacIntosh.

The series also includes several different sets of patient indices, which are presumably index cards for every patient MacIntosh treated. Most of the indices are alphabetical or chronological. However, there are several miscellaneous or misfiled boxes are patient index cards.

Notes: The patient files in this series represent only a fraction of the total patient files MacIntosh kept from his medical practices. During the appraisal process it was decided that only about one tenth of the total number of patent files held by MacIntosh could be permanently kept. An effort was made to keep patient files based on either the type of injury or affliction being treated, the function of the file – whether for legal or insurance purposes, as well as to keep patient files from the entire span of MacIntosh's career.

Access: All files within this series are restricted for 150 years from the last day of file creation in accordance with the Personal Health Information Protection Act (PHIPA). See file list for details.

Series 11: Certificates and artifacts

Date range: ca 1940s – 1980s

Extent: 0.28 m (1 box) of artifacts

Scope and content: This series contains several certificates and various diplomas earned by MacIntosh during his career. Included in this series is a set of artifacts: an intricate carved album containing news clippings and various ephemera documenting MacIntosh's life, a vitallium prosthetic for knee replacement surgery and a hand drawn card presented to MacIntosh after a lecture he gave in Japan. See series 1 for more biographical information.

Access: Open

Boxes: B2013-0036/001Art

Series 12: Photographs and media

Date range: 1944 – ca. 1980s

Extent: 0.75 m (4 boxes) of graphic records and moving images (11 reel to reel films)

Scope and content: This series contains photographs, glass lantern slides, photographic slides and a collection of reel to reel films belonging to MacIntosh. Most of the media covers MacIntosh's professional life: surgical images, patient photographs, procedure documentation and lecture and statistical slides. There are also a small number of personal and family photographic slides which document various family trips and events. Also included is a set of photographs of the HMS Philante, the escort vessel which MacIntosh served on with Royal Navy during the Second World War.

Access: Many files within this series are restricted for 150 years from the last day of file creation in accordance with the Personal Health Information Protection Act (PHIPA). See file list for details.
