The individuals documented here are members of the Peter and Rebecca McPhedran family, especially their son, John Harris, his first wife, Florence Davidson, and their children, Isobel ("Muffie) and Elizabeth, and Harris' second wife, Marie Green Duncan.

Harris McPhedran was born in 1882 in Lambton County, Ontario, educated locally in Wanstead and Watford, and in 1901 entered the medical program at the University of Toronto where his uncle, Alexander McPhedran, was a professor. He graduated with an MB in 1905 and from 1907 was associated both with the Faculty of Medicine and St. Michael's Hospital. He was renown both as a teacher and a physician, and in 1947 retired from academic work to devote himself to private practice.

One of the original members of the No. 4 Canadian General Hospital, he went overseas in 1915 with the Canadian Army Medical Corps and served at Salonika. Later, after convalescing in Canada from a severe bout of malaria, he served at the CAMC headquarters and with the Ontario Military Hospital at Orpington, Kent. In January, 1918 he was appointed as Officer-in-Charge of Medicine at No. 13 Canadian Military Hospital at Hastings and later at the Canadian General Hospital at Eastbourne. During World War II, he chaired, first, the Military Advisory Committee of the Ontario Medical Association and then the Procurement and Assignment Board.

Professionally he was an active in and elected president of the Toronto Academy of Medicine (1931), the Ontario Medical Association (1941), and the Canadian Medical Association (1944).

Of the last body he served as a member of its executive committee from 1947-1952, as chair of the council, and then as chair of the committee on economics. He was a Canadian representative at the first Commonwealth Medical Conference in Saskatoon in 1949, and at the second in Brisbane, Australia in 1950. In 1951 he visited Britain and reported fully on its national health scheme. In 1947 he was elected to the council of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, and in 1953 as its president, chair of the executive committee, and its representative to the Senate of the University of Toronto. In 1956, he resigned to become registrar-general of the College, retiring in 1960 due to ill-health. He then was appointed as consultant to the College until his death on 19 August, 1963.

Biographical Sketches

In 1908 Dr. McPhedran married Florence Davidson, who joined him in England during World War I with their two young daughters, Isobel Catherine (known to all as "Muffie") who was born in 1909, and Elizabeth Alexandra, born in 1911. Florence was determined to be a war correspondent, and even lobbied Prime Minister Borden to ensure that she could go to France. The authorities relented and reports from her trip in December, 1917 were forwarded to the Toronto Star. She seriously impaired her husband's chances for advancement by complaining to authorities about the treatment of troops at the Front.

After the War, the family settled again in Toronto, where Florence was involved in volunteer work. She died of a brain tumour in 1934. Muffie and Elizabeth were introduced to society, but the former left for New York in 1935 to study for a career on the concert stage. A year later she married Richard Dyer-Bennet and moved to California. Her marriage did not last and she returned to New York where she remained until her death in 1955.

In 1941 Elizabeth married Omond Solandt, first chair of the Defence Research Board. She died in 1971.

In 1936 Harris McPhedran married again, to Marie Willard Green. She was born in Sault Ste. Marie in 1904 and had attended University College for the academic year 1921-1922, before leaving for Normal School to help put her brothers through university. In 1927 she married Gordon George Duncan, captain of the Varsity intercollegiate football champion team in 1921 and a 1923 graduate in mining engineering. In the latter year he was appointed field engineer for the Mining Corporation of Canada in the new mining town of Flin Flon, Manitoba. At the time of his marriage he was in charge of exploration work for the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company. Marie was one of the first women to live there, and it was her experiences during these happy years that she drew on in writing her first book, Golden North. About 1928 Gordon made the first aerial flight into Bathurst Inlet. In 1929 he became director of field operations for the Northern Aerial Mining Exploration Company. He died in April, 1932. Having lost one kidney from a football injury, he succumbed when the other became tubercular. He was survived by his wife and a daughter, Kittie-Marie.

Biographical Sketches

By the time she married Harris, Marie was already writing short stories and had recently had published one about her experiences in the north. Over the next decade she wrote a large number of short stories for children, for which she had difficulty finding publishers. Her breakthrough came with her first novel, Golden North, the runner-up for the 1948 Governor-General's Award for juvenile fiction. Other books followed, including Cargoes on the Great Lakes, for which she won the 1952 Governor-General's Award. Later she began work on a biography of Jeanne Mance, but never completed it. She died on 1 September, 1974.

Textual, graphic, 1836-1963

This sous-fonds documents the activities of Harris McPhedran, the members of his family, of his first wife, Florence, and their children, Isobel (Muffie) and Elizabeth. Included also is correspondence received by him from his second wife, Marie, and his step-daughter, Kittie-Marie.

Included are indentures, biographical information, memorabilia, certificates and diplomas, correspondence, diaries, notebooks, manuscripts, addresses, photoprints and photonegatives, postcards, and glass-plate negatives.

Series 1: Biographical and personal

Textual, 1836-1963, 0.77 m.

This series contains a variety of materials on the activities of the McPhedran family, the earliest being indentures for the sale of property (1836-1864). These are followed by files containing notes on the McPhedran family, genealogical charts, biographical information, astrological readings, memorabilia, and certificates. The files on Harris McPhedran's education contain certificates (1894-1905), receipts, some course notes from his medical programme, and Class of 1905 memorabilia.

These are followed by official documents, ration cards and memorabilia relating to Harris' military service during World War I, and his will (1963). The series ends with biographical material relating to and a death certificate of his first wife, Florence Davidson, and certificates relating to the education of his daughters, Isobel ("Muffie") and Elizabeth.

Accession NumberProvenance*B1996-0016*McPhedran/Duncan/Green Family*Sous-fonds 1: Harris and Florence McPhedran*Series 2: Diaries and notebooks

Textual, graphic, 1907-1995, 0.60 m.

At various times, especially during World War I and in his later years when he suffered chronically from insomnia, Harris McPhedran kept a diary. The diaries begin in 1908, the year he got married and the last entry is for 8 August, 1963, just eleven days before he died. There are no diaries for 1910-1914 but, beginning in January, 1915, he began to keep an increasingly detailed record of his activities. His entries for the war years averaged over 200 pages; these are complemented by his voluminous personal correspondence to his wife. After the war, his output slowly declined but the diaries nevertheless provide insights into the politics in the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Toronto and its relationship to President Falconer, and an assessment of the significance of the discovery of insulin.

Except for a few entries on Florence's death in 1934, there are no diaries from June, 1924 to 1949. In the latter year he went to Saskatoon as a Canadian representative to the first Commonwealth Medical Conference. In 1950, with Dr. T. C. Routley, he attended the next conference in Brisbane, Australia. He wrote a detailed account of the first conference and kept a diary of the second conference. His diaries begin again in April, 1950 and continue uninterrupted until December, 1961. Because of his deteriorating health, there were no further entries until December, 1962 and infrequent ones thereafter.

The diaries are followed by a daily calendar for 1963 which contains a record of the medication that Dr. McPhedran was taking. The series ends with three notebooks on medical patients compiled by Dr. McPhedran in 1907, 1908, and in 1920, the last also with additional miscellaneous notes. A fourth notebook contains a list of Dr. McPhedran's patients and the fees charged for the calendar year 1923.

Between 1989 and 1995 Kittie-Marie Fells made partial transcripts, with annotations, of diary entries for 1908, January, 1915 and for a few days in 1955, and notes on Banting to accompany the 1923 diary. These are filed with the appropriate volumes.

Series 3: Correspondence

Textual, graphic, 1904-1963, 0.66 m.

The correspondence in this series documents the private and professional life of Harris McPhedran and of his first wife, Florence Davidson, the private lives of their siblings and other family members, their children ("Muffie" and Elizabeth) and of Harris's second wife, Marie Duncan Green. Marie's professional life is documented in Sous-fonds II.

This series is arranged around the two fairly distinct divisions of Harris McPhedran's life, that centred on his first wife, Florence, who died in 1934, and that relating to his life subsequently. The first division is dominated by Florence, initially the McPhedran family's reaction to Harris' engagement to her, then by the voluminous correspondence between them whenever they were apart. The letters written during World War I deal largely with personal and domestic issues, but also provide considerable information about Harris' medical activities and those of his fellow officers, including those seconded from the University of Toronto, and on Florence's successful campaign to become a war correspondent in France (her articles are in Series IV). The effect this had on Harris' career is revealed both in the correspondence and his autobiography (see Series IV). After the War, Florence continued to write to prime ministers on a variety of issues and in the early 1930s was still pushing the idea of being a correspondent.

Accession NumberProvenance*B1996-0016*McPhedran/Duncan/Green Family*Sous-fonds 1: Harris and Florence McPhedran*Series 3: Correspondence (cont'd)

The McPhedran daughters were taught how to behave in society but not the practical aspects of managing their lives. The consequences form an important part of Harris' life after 1934, as revealed in his correspondence with Muffie, to whom he was particularly close, and in the letters received from Elizabeth following her marriage to Omond Solandt in 1941.

The remaining correspondence documents Harris relationship with his second wife, Marie, with his siblings during their later years, and his professional life with Ontario Medical Association, the Canadian Medical Association and the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario. The latter correspondence is particularly revealing on the debate over socialized medicine.

The minor correspondents require some identification. Dr. Malcolm Cameron had been a classmate of Harris and was his best friend. Edith Rehman and Violet Shaw, former students of Dr. McPhedran, wrote him from Peking, China where they were teaching in language schools. Percy (who died in 1919) and Mrs. Batt were two of Dr. McPhedran's earliest patients. Peregrine, Lord St. Andries and his sisters were old friends of Harris and Marie.

A file listing for this series is found in Appendix 1.

Series 4: Manuscripts, publications, and addresses

Textual, 1913-1954, 0.14 m.

In 1948 Harris McPhedran began to record his life on paper, a project he continued to January, 1950. His "autobiography" was subsequently typed up, in part, by his step-daughter, Kitty-Marie. It takes his life up to shortly after the end of World War I. For the latter period, Harris relied heavily on his correspondence and his diaries. His manuscript is especially useful for the assessment he provides of each of his fellow officers in the Canadian Army Medical Corps, including fellow faculty members from the University of Toronto such as J. J. R. McLeod and Duncan Graham. It also covers the great influenza epidemic of 1918-1919.

Harris' autobiography is contained in the first four folders in this series.

Dr. McPhedran's output of professional writings was not large, about twenty articles over thirty years, beginning in 1913 and published largely in the St. Michael's Hospital Medical Bulletin and the Canadian Medical Association Journal. A single file contains a list of his publications, a draft of his first article, and offprints of several subsequent ones. It is followed by a file of three addresses delivered in 1925, 1931 and 1954, the last two being presidential addresses to the Academy of Medicine and the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario respectively.

During World War I, Florence McPhedran was allowed, after much lobbying, to go to France as a war correspondent. A series of her articles were published in the Toronto Star, drafts of ten of which are preserved here. Six of these were written while she was on the continent in December, 1917, and submitted under the heading, "Somewhere in France". Limited in where she could go and what she could see, the stories document lesser known topics such as the "Woman's motor ambulance convoy", "the hospital for the lesser heroes of the War--the horses", and the "Wounded and Missing" which described the work of those who wrote letters of comfort to families back home.

These are followed by the draft of a short piece on Florence, written after the War by an unknown hand, and entitled "Florence, a story".

Next are three pieces by Muffie -- two short stories, "The new fairy book" (September, 1918), and one written for her father as a Christmas present (1918?), and a school essay written when she was in Form I (in England?) -- and a short story, "The story of the fairy cat", written by Elizabeth in Eastbourne in 1917.

The last item in this series is the script for a play, "Judas", written by A. E. Johnson of the Agricultural College in Winnipeg (undated), an old friend of the McPhedrains who later taught at Syracuse University.

Textual, graphic, 1936-198-, 0.82 m.

This sous-fonds consists biographical information about and the personal correspondence and a diary of Marie Duncan Green, the second wife of Harris McPhedran; correspondence and research notes relating to and drafts of her short stories and books for children, for one of which she was awarded the Governor-General's Award for juvenile fiction, along with reviews of her books and addresses relating to them and her writing in general; and radio scripts with covering correspondence.

Series 1: Personal notes and correspondence

Textual, 1930-1973, 0.07 m.

This series begins with a file of biographical notes and correspondence, followed by a diary that Marie kept of the first leg of Harris round-the-world trip in 1950, when she accompanied him to England and Paris. There is a file of letters from Harris to Marie (1936-1962) and other correspondence relating to family and estate matters, including letters of condolence received by Marie on the death of her husband in 1963. Other correspondents include two of Marie's friends, Norah Michener and Ethel Wilson. There is also correspondence of a professional nature with, amongst others, the Canadian Authors Association and Southam Press.

Series 2: Manuscripts and publications

Textual, graphic 1933-1971, 0.72 m.

This series contains the correspondence regarding and drafts of stories and books, largely relating to children, that Marie McPhedran wrote over thirty-five years. Most of her short stories were never published, but three books appeared between 1948 and 1953. Also included are public addresses related to her writing, radio scripts, and an account of a trip to Russia in 1958 by Ian McLaren, god-father to Marie's son, John Harris McPhedran.

The correspondence with publishers underlines the difficulties that Canadian writers, especially women, then had in getting their material into print. With children's literature, the problems were even greater. Marie McPhedran's books sold well and she was fortunate to have a supportive editor in John Gray at Macmillan's. Even so, she spent much time and effort in lining up publishers and could not find any for most of her short stories.

Her published books -- Golden North, David and the White Cat, and Cargoes on the Great Lakes -- are all represented here. The first was the runner-up for the Governor-General's Award for juvenile fiction for 1948 and the last won it four years later. Golden North, in particular, sold well in Britain (where it was placed on the school curriculum) and the United States, as well as in Canada.

Two projects she never completed. One was a book, Adventure in Canada (1948-1949), for the publisher Julian Messner in New York, possibly because the latter lost interest. Her last major writing project was a biography of Jeanne Mance, which eventually defeated her. Her correspondence, research notes, and drafts of the uncompleted manuscript have survived. The research files contain notes, partial drafts, and outlines. They were numbered by Marie McPhedran consecutively from #1 to #50 (there are no numbered files 4-10, 16-19, 23-26, 37-38, 41-49). The order that she established for these and other files relating to the writing of this book has been maintained.

The arrangement in this series is generally chronological and by title.

Marie McPhedran was much in demand as a public speaker, beginning with the success of Golden North. Her public addresses relating to her books and writing in general, and her fan mail, are interfiled with the appropriate book titles.
