R.Brian Land Personal Records*Scope and Content

Records [textual ; graphic ; architectural], 1928-1993, 2.13 metres

Correspondence, diaries, addresses, notes, minutes, reports, manuscripts, photoprints, a watercolour, a sketch and an architectural drawing documenting Dr. Land's career as a professor of and administrator in library science at the University of Toronto and as provincial librarian of Ontario.

Access: All records are open except for the files marked with an asterisk (*); these records are closed for a period of 75 years from the last date in the file.

The records described below were retrieved from Professor Land's office at the University of Toronto. The "personal" files deal primarily with professional matters, but at a personal rather than an official administrative level.

Biographical Sketch

Reginald Brian Land was born in Niagara Falls on 29 July, 1927. He attended Oakwood Collegiate before entering University College as an undergraduate in 1945 and received his BA honours in political science and economics in 1949. He was active in the Political Science Club and the International Relations Club, sports editor of the Undergrad in his third year and, through his four years at the U of T, a reporter for the Varsity. With fellow students in commerce, finance and political science, he played in the Little Vic Hockey League on the ice rink beside Victoria College.

After graduation, Land worked as a copy editor for the mail order division of Eaton's, then entered library school, receiving his BLS in 1953 and his MLS in 1956. While there he gained practical experience in the Reference Library of the Toronto Public Library system (1953-1955) and as a cataloguer in the University library (1955-1956). For several years, beginning in 1954, he chaired the committee that reorganized the University of Toronto Library School Alumni Association. Following graduate school, he spent a year as head of the business and industry division of the Windsor (Ontario) Public Library, at the same time undertaking a project to index the Labour Gazette for the federal Department of Labour. He left Windsor for Montreal in November, 1957 to become associate editor of Canadian Business. His work here earned him an award for editorial writing in the field of business and finance. While in Montreal, he did further graduate work in political science at McGill.

In 1959 he joined the University of Toronto as an assistant librarian, and played a leading role in professional organizations. From 1961-1963 he served as president of the Institute of Professional Librarians of Ontario, and also was vice-president of the Ontario Library Association and a Council member of the Canadian Library Association.

Land continued to maintain his interest in politics and education, for in 1960 he re-entered graduate school as an MA student. The subject of his dissertation was the Toronto riding of Eglinton during the 1962 federal election that was published in 1965. Immediately following the 1963 election, he was given a year's leave from the Library to serve as executive assistant to Walter Gordon during his tumultuous first year as finance minister in Lester Pearson's minority government. In 1965, he conducted a poll analysis of the Davenport riding, covering the years 1952-1963, for Gordon. The next year he became an executive officer of the Davenport-Dovercourt Liberal Association, from which he was a delegate to the Liberal convention in 1968 that selected Pierre Elliott Trudeau as successor to Prime Minister Pearson.

When Walter Gordon began writing his memoirs, Pursuit of an ideal – Canadian independence, after he retired from politics in 1965, he turned for assistance to his former executive assistant. Land acted as an advisor and also wrote portions of the manuscript. The project was abandoned in 1969, although several drafts of the manuscript had been completed.

In February, 1964 Land's appointment was announced as director of the School of Library Sciences at the University of Toronto in succession to Bertha Bassam. He left

Ottawa in May and during his ten-years as director, remained active both in his profession and in the wider world. In the late 1960s he served as a building consultant to several Canadian and American universities. One of the highlights of his tenure as director occurred in 1972, when the School was upgraded to the Faculty of Library Science. In 1973 he stepped down as Dean and went on sabbatical leave, during which time he was appointed a part-time commissioner of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

He then returned to full-time teaching and an active involvement in professional activities. In 1978 he was appointed executive director of the Legislative Library, from which he retired in 1993. He remained a professor part-time at the Faculty of Library Science. His professional activities were many and varied. They included a 1983 trip with three other Canadian librarians to the People's Republic of China. The next year, as president of the Association of Parliamentary Librarians in Canada, he was attended the group's international conference in Brisbane.

Scope and Content

Records [textual, cartographic, graphic, artifacts], 1946-1969, 2.45 metres

These records document the activities of Brian Land as an undergraduate at the University of Toronto and as a librarian; as executive assistant (1963-1964) to Walter Gordon when, as Minister of Finance, he presented his first budget in the House of Commons in 1963; as a member of the executive of the Davenport-Dovercourt Liberal Association (Gordon's constituency), and as advisor to and partial author of Gordon's incomplete memoir, Pursuit of an ideal – Canadian independence. They also cover his involvement in the 1962 federal election (the subject of his MA thesis) that was published in 1965 as Eglinton: the election study of a federal constituency.

Series 2: 1962 election, Eglinton constituency

Records [textual, cartographic, artifacts], 1956-1965, 1.44 m.

Brian Land enrolled in the School of Graduate Studies in the fall of 1960 as a political science student. The opportunity for a thesis topic arose in the spring of 1962 as a federal election loomed. He chose to conduct a study of the campaign in the Eglinton constituency in Toronto, partly because he was a resident and because he had a personal acquaintance with a number of the principals involved.

Land offered his services to Donald Fleming, the long-standing Progressive Conservative member from the Toronto riding of Eglinton, and Minister of Finance in John Diefenbaker's government. It was the first and only time that Land worked for a Conservative candidate. His notebook records that his first meeting was on May 10 and, over the next five weeks, he immersed himself in the strategy sessions, meetings, and envelope stuffing sessions and other activities of electioneering. He attended meetings of the Liberal candidate, Mitchell Sharp, as well as those of Mr. Fleming, and collected campaign literature from all parties.

This series contains background material to the constituency, Land's notebook, correspondence, notes, membership and voter lists, poll revisions, maps, election results by poll, addresses, campaign literature and buttons, and press coverage. The bulk of the material relates to the Fleming campaign.

The records are grouped by function.

Series 3: Master of Arts thesis and Eglinton

Records [textual, cartographic, artifacts], 1961-1965, 0.14 m.

The material that Brian Land gathered during the 1962 federal election formed the basis for his MA thesis that was written under the supervision of Paul Fox. The first part of this series comprises correspondence about the thesis and a copy of its second volume, “Appendices”, that contains charts, campaign literature, buttons, and maps (some oversized), and notes for the bibliography.

Note: The buttons remain attached to the textual records.

Volume I, which contains the body of the thesis, is in B93-0026/001(15)-(16).

The second part of this series contains the files relating to the publication, in 1965, of Land’s thesis as Eglinton: the election study of a federal constituency. Included are the author’s contract, a typescript of the text, notes for and drafts of the index, and the galley and page proofs.

Series 4: Executive Assistant, Minister of Finance

Records [textual], 1962-1965, 0.48 m.

Brian Land's appointment as executive assistant to Walter Gordon in May, 1963, occurred at a time of promise and potential peril for the new Liberal government of Lester Pearson. In power after a highly charged election, the government did not have an overall majority and was especially vulnerable to attack if one of its ministers slipped up. Walter Gordon's first budget, presented on 13 June, caused a major row in the House of Commons because he had used advisers from outside the government and because some measures were very controversial. He was constantly under attack through the summer and the government embarked on a series of revisions and retreats. While the budget was approved in principle within two weeks, the Finance Minister was soon forced to bring in a number of changes and final approval did not take place until August. His second budget was presented in March, 1964, by which time Land's appointment as the new Director of the School of Library Science had already been announced. Land left Ottawa at the end of May.

While this series contains correspondence, memoranda, and appointment schedules relating to Land's activities generally as Gordon's executive assistant, the emphasis is on the 1963 and 1964 budgets, especially the former. The records include correspondence, memoranda, discussion notes, notes, and drafts of budget speeches; notes for and drafts of Gordon's post-budget speeches and answers to questions in the House; addresses by him, press releases from his office, weekly summaries of press reports from the office of the Prime Minister, and press clippings.

Series 5: Davenport-Dovercourt Liberal Association

Records [textual, cartographic, artifacts], 1952-1968, 0.10 m.

Brian Land's involvement in party politics was primarily in the Liberal party at the federal level. He was a member of the executive of the Davenport-Dovercourt Liberal Association, for which, in 1965, he carried out a study of the Davenport voting record by conducting a poll analysis for the years 1952-1963. In February of 1968 he was elected as a delegate to the forthcoming Liberal leadership convention that chose Pierre Elliott Trudeau to succeed Lester Pearson as Prime Minister.

This series contains files consisting of: the constitution, lists of executive officers, minutes, correspondence and press clippings documenting the activities of the Davenport-Dovercourt Liberal Association from 1965-1968; the questionnaire, notes, correspondence, maps and report relating to the Davenport voting record; local press coverage, poll results and capitulation sheets for Eglinton riding in 1963 when Mitchell Sharp was elected for the first time (in oversized folders); campaign literature and press clippings relating to Walter Gordon's successful re-election in 1965; and credentials (including buttons and decals) for and press clippings about the Association's delegates to the 1968 convention.

Series 6: Walter Gordon

This series documents some of Walter Gordon's activities from 1965 to 1969. It begins with a number of his addresses, an article and a few press clippings. These files are followed by an annotated copy of the Foreign Ownership and the Structure of Canadian Industry, the report of the Task Force on the Structure of Canadian Industry that he chaired, and press releases relating to it.

The remaining files relate to the attempt by Gordon to write his autobiography, Pursuit of an Ideal – Canadian Independence. In February, 1969, after having written a portion of the manuscript, he approached his former executive assistant for advice on its potential for publication and for commentary and assistance with the manuscript. Over the next six months Land compiled extensive notes for revisions, but the project was eventually abandoned.

The files in this portion of the series contain photocopies of the typescript produced up to April, 1969 by Gordon and which were annotated by Land; a revised typescript (May, 1969); revisions made early in June by Brian Land; an appendix (26 June); later notes for and drafts made by Land of chapters 16-21, and inserts for various chapters (June-August).

The subject of his dissertation was the Toronto riding of Eglinton during the 1962 federal election that was published in 1965. Immediately following the 1963 election, he was given a year's leave from the Library to serve as executive assistant to Walter Gordon during his tumultuous first year as finance minister in Lester Pearson's minority government. In 1965, he conducted a poll analysis of the Davenport riding, covering the years 1952-1963, for Gordon. The next year he became an executive officer of the Davenport-Dovercourt Liberal Association, from which he was a delegate to the Liberal convention in 1968 that selected Pierre Elliott Trudeau as successor to Prime Minister Pearson.

When Walter Gordon began writing his memoirs, Pursuit of an ideal – Canadian independence, after he retired from politics in 1965, he turned for assistance to his former executive assistant. Land acted as an advisor and also wrote portions of the manuscript. The project was abandoned in 1969, although several drafts of the manuscript had been completed.

In February, 1964 Land's appointment was announced as director of the School of Library Sciences at the University of Toronto in succession to Bertha Bassam. He left Ottawa in May and during his ten-years as director, remained active both in his profession and in the wider world. In the late 1960s he served as a building consultant to several Canadian and American universities. One of the highlights of his tenure as director occurred in 1972, when the School was upgraded to the Faculty of Library Science. In 1973 he stepped down as Dean and went on sabbatical leave, during which time he was appointed a part-time commissioner of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

He then returned to full-time teaching and an active involvement in professional activities. In 1978 he was appointed executive director of the Legislative Library, from which he retired in 1993. He remained a professor part-time at the Faculty of Library Science. His professional activities were many and varied. They included a 1983 trip with three other Canadian librarians to the People's Republic of China. The next year, as president of the Association of Parliamentary Librarians in Canada, he attended the group's international conference in Brisbane.

Series 2 Institute of Professional Librarians of Ontario

.33 metres; textual                                      1959-1963

In 1954, a group of professional librarians met at the annual conference of the Ontario Library Association to discuss the formation of a group within the OLA. In February 1955, the Council of the OLA approved the formation of a Professional Committee. By 1956, discussions were well underway by the Committee to form a separate professional organization of librarians. In 1957, the Professional Committee drafted a constitution for a new section of the OLA to be called the Institute of Professional Librarians. However, it was not until May 1958 that the new section was formally created. Miss Betty Magee, Windsor Public Library was elected president for 1958-1959. By May 1960, the new section had enough support to establish itself as an autonomous organization and became incorporated and adopted its own by-laws. Miss Louise Schryver of the Chatham Public Library was elected President for 1960-1961. In 1961, Brian Land was elected President for 1961-1962.

The records in this series document Prof. Land's involvement with the Institute from its establishment as a committee of the OLA in 1959 through his presidency of 1961-1962, and as past-president in 1963. It includes files relating to a Personnel workshop held in 1962, the development and passing of An act respecting the Institute of Professional Librarians of Ontario in 1962-1963, chronology and article on the history of the IPL, Nominating Committee, Constitution Committee, membership, trade unions and professional standards. Files contain correspondence, notes, reports, minutes of meetings, etc.
