COACH HOUSE PRESS (Papers)

Gift of Stan Bevington, 2007-08

Dates: [196-]-2005

Extent: 172 Boxes (20.5 metres)

Scope and Content: This is the first accession of the Coach House Press (CHP) papers by the Fisher Library. It primarily includes files accumulated and maintained by Stan Bevington, founder of the CHP. (While Library and Archives Canada holds a significant amount of Coach House Press materials, Bevington held back many of his own personal files related to CHP, with the intention of donating them to the Fisher Library.) The papers include accounting materials for the Press – price quotes, sales invoices, payroll information, etc. – and other materials related to the running of the CHP. It also includes material collected by Bevington, dubbed “Stan’s ephemera,” which contain handwritten notes written by Bevington, as well as correspondence, programs and other assorted and interesting items.

The collection is particularly noteworthy for its extensive collection of computer-related material, including the files for SoftQuad, the company co-founded by Bevington that was at the forefront of the digital age in publishing. Bevington is considered a publishing pioneer in the transition to digital technology from traditional typesetting.

Administrative History: Long considered one of the leading small-press publishers in Canada, Coach House Press was founded in 1965 by printer Stan Bevington and editor Wayne Clifford. In its formative years, Coach House was a cohesive printing and publishing unit, publishing innovative and activist open-form writers from the United States and Canada in a style characterized by hand-set type and multi-coloured offset printing. In 1974, the single literary editor, who at the time was Victor Coleman, was replaced by an editorial board consisting of Coach House writers and other members of the staff, including Bevington, writers bpNichol, Michael Ondaatje, Frank Davey, David Young, graphic artist Rick/Simon, and writers’ agent, Linda McCartney.

During the 1974-1988 period, the press expanded its scope to publish established writers, such as D.G. Jones, Louis Dudek, Eli Mandel, Dorothy Livesay, Robert Kroetsch, Phyllis Webb, as well as emerging writers. Diverse titles produced include Ondaatje's The Long Poem Anthology (1979) and Bowering's Fiction of Contemporary Canada (1980), various titles on the history of Canadian photography and architecture and a Quebec translation series of works by Ferron, Brossard, and others.

In 1991, Coach House was split into two separate companies: the printing house Coach House Printing, headed by Bevington, and the book publisher Coach House Press, headed by Margaret McClintock. Bevington subsequently tried, unsuccessfully, to reacquire the publishing company. Ultimately, the book publisher declared bankruptcy in 1996, and later the same year Bevington moved the printing company back into book publishing.

The reputation of the new Coach House has been growing steadily since its rebirth in 1997, but it skyrocketed with the publication of Christian Bök's Eunoia. This work of experimental poetry won the Canadian Griffin Poetry Prize in 2002 and has sold over 19,000 copies. Coach House books have been the recipients of dozens of other awards and nominations, including the Governor General's Award, the Toronto Book Award, the Commonwealth Writers' Prize, the Lambda Book Award, the Books in Canada/Amazon.ca First Novel Award and the Trillium Book Award. In 2008, Coach House was awarded the Province of Ontario's inaugural Premier's Award for Excellence in the Arts for Arts Organizations.

Coach House has been at the centre of a number of innovations in the use of digital technology in publishing and printing, from computerized phototypesetting to desktop publishing. Notably, the pioneering SGML/XML company, SoftQuad, was founded by Coach House's Stan Bevington and colleagues Yuri Rubinsky and David Slocombe.

Coach House is one of the few Canadian publishing companies that prints its own titles. The printing operations also print books for several other small Canadian publishers and literary magazines.

COACH HOUSE PRESS (Papers)

Files mostly date from 1975-1985, except “Type Specimens” which seem to cover a broader range.

Editorial Meeting Minutes was pulled from Series B in order to create Series P.

Series B.1 Boxes 67-70	General (Colleagues, Events, Programs, People, Vendors) Files arranged alphabetically. Material includes: collotype, a reproduction process that allows for continuous ink, which CHP successfully experimented using photographic film for this process; Pier Giorgio DiCicco; collection of Dreadnaught broadsides; 1976 catalogues of Oberon Press; Toronto Life magazines (1988, 1994, 1997) featuring CHP; 1988 article by Alberto Manguel.
Subseries B.2 Boxes 71-78	Type Specimens from Foundries Includes many printing brochures and materials for letterpress, linotype, monotype, photomechanical and digital typesetting. Files arranged alphabetically.
Subseries B.3 Boxes 79-83	People and Organizations Contains files for many writers and artists, including George Bowering, Matt Cohen, Stan Dragland, Brian Fawcett, Greg Hollingshead, George Johnston, David McFadden, Michael Ondaatje, among others. Most files have few contents. A notable exception is Jerry Ofo’s file, which contains photographs. Some price quotes also appear for various organizations (for example, Open Letter, Osborne Collection, etc.)

Series C: Typesetting – Boxes 84-89

VIP (Variable Input Typesetter) was a computer-controlled, photomechanical typesetting machine. It was fed punched paper tape that contained codes about which characters to expose and where. It then produced images on photographic paper.

OCR (Optical Character Recognition) was an early scanning technology that allowed a machine to recognize characters on a typed page and then punch tape based on this information. CHP wanted to use OCR to avoid the process of keying in code to punch paper tape.

MS

COACH HOUSE PRESS (Papers)

VIP fonts could be purchased on film to be used in typesetting machines. CHP purchased ready-made VIP fonts and also found a way to use them to create new, unique fonts.

Carl Dair designed the Cartier font for photomechanical machines.

Subseries C.1 Box 84	Miscellaneous Includes: Linotronic 300/500 user manual; PostScript RIP 40 software and manual; OCR binder from early 1970s; Roll of unpunched paper tape; Rolls of exposed photographic paper output from VIP typesetting machine; Letraset product manual (1976)
Subseries C.2 Boxes 85-86	Fonts purchased by CHP On floppy disks, contained in two 8.5" x 11" boxes.
Subseries C.3-7 Box 87 25 Folders	Various
Subseries C.3 Folders 1-2	Carl Dair's drawings for Cartier and Cartier italic Photocopies
Subseries C.4 Folders 3-10	VIP Fonts From two separate binders, labeled A and B. Set A includes of folder of film version of displayed fonts
Subseries C.5 Folders 11-16	CHP typeface samples, 1990 Removed from a binder; used to show to clients
Subseries C.6 Folders 17-24	QuarkXPress Newsletters, 1989-96
Subseries C.7 Folder 25	Misc. Includes "Printed in Canada on Canadian Paper by mindless acid freaKs" logo; some font samples; sheet of old engraving tools
